A Change of Perspective

Besides waiting for the lockdown to end, there's nothing left for us to do but to go outside, enjoy the fresh air and let our eyes wander...

Step 1: Tool to change your perspective

Grab your favourite markers and coloured pencils; take your watercolour set out of the drawer and get your sketchbook or drawing pad. The main thing is that you have a good drawing base and drawing material that you like!

In addition, you will need a tool to change your perspective.

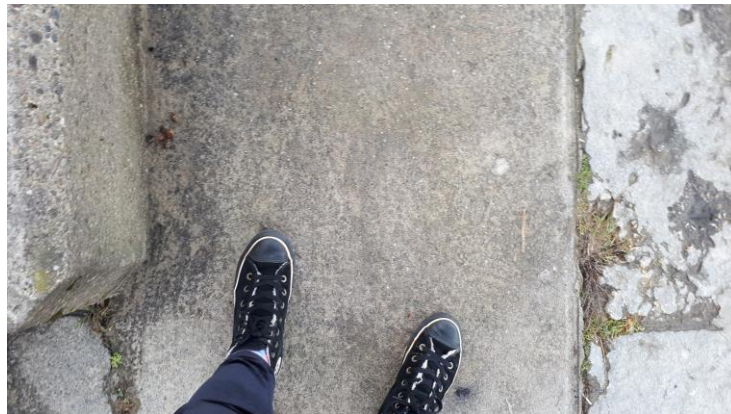

Our suggestions:

Take an empty jam jar or a glass bottle: Look through the glass. Do you see how your surroundings distort? Whether diving goggles, reading glasses or tinted sunglasses, a mirror or a magnifying glass - take something with you that changes your view.

Step 2: Stroll & Discover

In line with our exhibition "Big City Life", we set off on our journey to the city! We strolled through the streets and alleys of Basel and were inspired by our immediate surroundings. The most unusual things can be discovered on a walk! To get a completely new perspective on your area, you can use your "special" tool – we cut out a piece of a red plastic foil.

Step 3: Observe, paint & draw

Look through the tool you brought with you. We have suddenly perceived our surrounding very differently through our red plastic foil. Now try to draw exactly what you see. Make sure that you capture the changed perspective and do not think about what your immediate surrounding normally looks like. Draw exactly what you see through your tool.

Participate in our drawing competition and become a flâneur!

Join in and show us pictures of what you discovered on your strolls! Did you find a special place or something unexpected in your neighbourhood? Did your walks and expeditions cause you to encounter something new? Become a flâneur with us!

Be it drawn, painted, cut out or collaged – email us a picture of your newfound view of the city.

We will present your pictures in our library and a surprise will be awarded for the best drawings.

Required form: Send a JPG in 300dpi resolution to us at info@cartoonmuseum.ch.

Submission deadline: May, 30th, 2021

Have fun!

We are looking forward to your submissions!
